human interest stuff about these fine shoes

"Best" L., our Basement Shoe Buyer, has a brother, "A. A." L., in Pittsburgh. These two men know shoes from 20 years' experience, and know where to find unusual things—and what's more, contrary to the usual idea about brothers, they're good pals.

"Best" found that "Cammeyer" of N. Y. wanted to sell out their men's business. He wired "A. A.", and the two of them together bought the entire stock. Half of it went to "Pittsburgh's greatest shoe" (Kaufmann & Fabry's)—the other half to Filene's, Boston.

A lot of shoe men have been in the last few days wanting to get some of these shoes for their own personal use. A buyer from a great store in California is going to have a pair sent all the way to the coast.

The head of a big local retail business says that he is going to buy his pair. The president of a big shoe factory out far from Boston says that he is going to be the first in line when the doors open tomorrow.

When all these men who really know good shoes are so enthusiastic about the values—how about yourself?

Every lot must sell quickly or take a reduction after 12 selling days. The second lot, 11 reduction after 24 selling days, counts given away after 36 selling days.

FEAR EFFECT OF RAIL STRIKES

Transportation Troubles Believed to Menace Industries of New England

who is here in the interests of the railroad employees, announced that the railroad men in reply to the strike in Baltimore, he said, will be forced to fight in Philadelphia. The situation will become rapidly.

New Haven Freight Embargo Follows Walkout

Secondary strike of railroad yardmen at several important traffic centers in the East were said today to threaten particularly the industries of New England, many of whom are already for lack of coal.

The strike for the first time has reached an important point in New England, the walkout of several hundred men at New Haven being followed promptly by an embargo on all freight shipments from that city.

Local officials of the New York, New Haven & Hartford, and Boston & New England railroads expressed today that the strike will not reach Boston unless the railroad men are induced by the city government.

What happened yesterday at Philadelphia, Baltimore, New Haven & New York, according to the same officials, is that the railroad men are including many who regarded the strike as a means of forcing the city to pay a higher rate for freight.

Those of the strikers who would have the matter at all said that the railroad men are not only striking but also are striking the city government. They are striking the city government, they are striking the city government, they are striking the city government.

When the strikers were asked how they are not only striking but also are striking the city government. They are striking the city government, they are striking the city government, they are striking the city government.

would be necessary for street operation to remove the street tracks.

The suspension of the 20-minute standing rule between the hours of 5 p. m. and 1 a. m. is to allow men to dine comfortably at hotels, restaurants and attend the theatre without molestation from the taxicab.

The police still have authority to use where a vehicle stops, or be placed.

Children are required to stand on the curb on the right of all streets except, excepting downtown streets, where they must stand at the curb on an amount of walking conditions. Only when leading children may the left curb be used in their own way.

Care standing at licensed places may no longer lead in either direction. They must lead in the general direction of traffic at the curb on the right the same as other vehicles.

On the recommendation of Commissioner Murphy, vehicles are prohibited from standing within fifty feet of either side of a fire station on both sides of the street and on the right side of the street.

Where the 20-minute standing rule will not apply, as in the case of the taxicab, the taxicab will be permitted to stand at the curb on the right side of the street.

Class Day Exercises Draw Throng to Campus and Stadium for Annual Event

Class day exercises at Harvard today were marked by all the pomp and circumstance of a gala celebration. Ideal weather and the enthusiasm engendered by the Harvard drive combined to bring thousands of alumni back for the annual reunion, and the exercises were given out for the excitement of the stadium.

Awakened at 4 o'clock by bugles in the college yard, the seniors marched solemnly in chapel for the first time since the late war. Shortly afterward the class assembled in front of Holy Trinity Hall, and was marched to Nundora Theatre, where the exercises were given in the absence of F. K. Bullard, who was away with the basketball team.

Joseph Bullard, class chairman, led the seniors behind the band. William W. Worcester was the class day orator, and "The Mission of America" was his subject. The class day orator, and "The Mission of America" was his subject. The class day orator, and "The Mission of America" was his subject.

A PRETTIER shade of blue for your sun-faded voile.

Just the perfect coral you have wanted for the costume blouse that has turned yellow from careless washing.

For blouses, for underwear, or the children's dresses, lovelier shades than you have ever been able to wash into a garment before.

You get these lovelier shades with Twink, the new colored flakes.

Twink is made by a wonderful new method for producing colors, that makes it possible to get more exquisite shades than have ever before been obtained.

When it was found that in this product any fashionable shade could be produced, the fashion color authorities of the country were asked to select the loveliest and smartest colors for this season. Twink was then made to match these colors.

The gay Twink flakes dissolve instantly in boiling or very hot water. You whip them into a bright lather and put in your yellowed crêpe de chine blouse or your faded camisole. Swish it about in the rich suds for a few minutes, squeeze the suds gently through the fabric, then rinse in cold waters.

In a twinkling you have a charming cool green blouse in place of your yellowed one, a dainty flesh colored camisole that looks as if it had never been worn.

Clear, even color every time

The Twink colors turn out right every time. There is not a particle of solid soap to spot or streak the garment—not a bit of rubbing to wear the fabric.

You get clear, even color every time, and color so fast that you can wash your blouse or chemise several times before its next Twinking. Twink will not injure any fabric that water alone will not harm.

Get Twink today in the season's most popular colors, the ones you have been wanting. Just follow the surprisingly easy directions that come with the package. You can get Twink at your druggist's, the department stores and the 5 and 10 cent stores. Lever Bros. Co., Cambridge, Mass.

What Twink is doing for other women

I have tried several Twink colors for renewing faded and discolored blouses—and have been surprised and pleased at the ease with which the wonderful results were obtained.

One blouse which I thought could not be worn again—I used Pink Twink and it gave it a beautiful shade—making it almost new again—for only 10 cents.

Miss Edna Phillips,
Cambridge, Mass.

I was so delighted with your new dye product that I felt I must let you know of my success. I used Twink in Turquoise on a faded light blue georgette blouse. I followed the very simple directions and my blouse turned out a beautiful even color—many of my friends spoke of what a beautiful shade of Turquoise it was, and they could scarcely believe it when I told them it had been dyed.

New York City.

Mexico in Revolution

—BY—
Vincente Blasco Ibanez

I also recognize that all that Wilson did in the best of faith and with the object of arriving at the best possible solution. There were moments, besides, when the Mexican mass was involved enough to turn the steadiest man in the world crazy. But Wilson's indecisive and vacillating nature was fatal. Any policy that he had in mind would have been abandoned before it was put into effect.

When a Girl Marries

Interesting Developments in the Trials and Slight Jealousies of a Newly Wedded Couple

By Ann Lisle

WAS in the midst of exclaiming over my beautiful pearl ring when Bertha, my maid, appeared in the doorway and tremblingly asked if she could speak to me. As I started across the room I tripped over the rug and dropped the ring into the hall. Afterward I remembered that Bertha's eyes followed me intently. As I reached the door the telephone rang, so, fumbling over my shoulder a request that Jim answer it, I stepped into the hall to my maid.

"I have to leave you tonight, Mrs. Harrison," said Bertha, in a voice that sounded husky, as if she had been crying.

"Why, Bertha?" I protested. "You wouldn't leave me without a minute's notice, would you?"

"I got to go tonight," she repeated.

"But Jim will be lying around with my smile in a case. Surely, you won't do that?"

"What makes you think you must rush off like this?"

"I got to go tonight," Bertha insisted.

The maid would neither explain her necessity nor change her plan. I gave her up as a bad job. When I returned to the living room Daisy was sitting there alone.

"The phone message was for Carl," she explained. "Your husband called him. Carl's getting so important now that he has to act as doctor and tell his patients number wherever he goes. I wonder if you'll mind if I run along now."

"As if you were to go to wait for Carl? I said, since it was so important in order to have Carl carry out his engagement with Daisy and I, I had invited her to call."

"No, what's the matter?" she questioned. "I've never heard of Carl's party as soon as he found you weren't going to be there."

An Insulting Outburst

"That's it, wasn't that?" I explained. "He only postponed the party till next week so that we could all be there."

Daisy turned on me with a sudden flash in her eyes and a stately manner which gave her a personality, even though it was the personality of anger.

"He postponed the party for you. Everything for you. An adoring husband, Jimmie. That's what Carl called me. That's what he called me. Can't you leave him alone? He's got to go to the party. You called him a big brother and told everything he said to give him. He doesn't matter to you now. But you—your mother to everyone. Have you ever read the story of David and Uriah?"

And laughing heartily at her own amazing words she rushed from the room, in such a whirl of anger and energy that I didn't attempt to follow on my behalf.

Jimmie, limping into the hall, called Jim and told him of Bertha's unwelcome announcement that she was going to leave.

"Happen you try to persuade her to change her mind," suggested Jim.

Jim grumbled a little, but acquiesced. He went out to the dining room, where Bertha was sitting at the table. I followed to listen to him. But Bertha, proud and secretive. When we returned to the living room Carl was standing by the window waiting for us.

"I have to run right along," he explained. "It's just as well that my party for tonight was postponed for Mr. Hildana has asked me to Jump up in Canada after a new corporation that's going in for international advertising. See you a week from tonight."

"Then a brief good-bye and the second of our guests rushed off."

"Jim seemed dazed and over his little floor in international business."

"Some men do get excited over every day they live. Where the little day?"

"She also went off in a rush. I said, feeling a little amused at the way things were disposing of themselves."

"What did he mean by 'You a week from tonight'?"

"Jim, don't call Carl a boaster."

"I protested. 'It's a nice old dear. A good friend. And he's the first of my little friends. I've asked for you to meet. You might be decent to him.'"

"I can't stand the greedy-eyed man who stands and gossips," said Jim.

Jim Evidently Jealous

I couldn't help chuckling over Jim's evident jealousy as the second person he had selected to acquaint with.

"Carl's always been the best pal a girl ever had," I explained patiently.

"Don't pull any of that platonic friendship stuff," Jim cried. "The man's love with you."

"You think every man I meet out of your own circle of intimates is in love with me?" I asked him.

"I don't know. Just that he's a little bit of a boaster."

"I thought the lady did protest too much and that she was just being a little bit of a boaster."

As a Woman Thinketh

All my life, I have wanted to be a "lady."

Oh, dear, no! I don't mean merely "well bred," or "fashionable," or "smart," or "modish," or "chic," or "polished."

I mean a "lady" in the widest, old, rosy, 1899 sense.

The sort of "lady" that every little girl dreams of being, and that every little boy dreams of marrying—some day.

The sort that reminds one of lavender, and lilacs, and old lace.

And has "charming MANNERS," and a "gracious" smile, and a "quaint" presence, and soft, white hands and illusions and dignity and reserve—

And all those things, so fascinating to MEN!

I wish I could "be" a lady, instead of just being like a "lady."

I wish I could "be" a lady, instead of just being like a "lady."

The Taste for Sweets

By Brice Belden, M. D.

THE taste for sweets is of an intensity that requires explanation. Since it is a human characteristic that is not wholly normal.

Since points out that sweets were rare in the earlier ages of mankind. Honey and the fruits provided only a part of what our remote forefathers could have probably used, since they led lives of great muscular activity and required foods which like sugar, could be quickly converted into energy.

That a sugar hunger was generated which has been systematically catered to through improved processes of cultivation, extraction and purification.

So our sugar supply became beautiful and the recent generations abused the consumption of it.

Sugar is really needed in fair quantity only by the manual worker. Very little is required by children and those of great nervous and mental activity.

The first nutritional damage which later developed was the consumption of it.

Many of the ills of childhood would not appear if children could be protected against sweets in early years.

ABOUT OUR GOOD FRIEND Lewis

Copyright, 1920, by The Ledger Syndicate

LEWIS

VARIATIONS — Lewison, Lewis, Ludovics, RACIAL ORIGIN—Old Teutonic.

SOURCE—A given name.

YOUR natural conclusion is that the surname of Lewis and its variations are but developments of the Christian name of Louis, despite the difference in spelling; and in the main this is true, though Lewis also is traceable to other sources.

However, the original form of the given name Louis was not Louis. It was Chlodowig. It was brought into western Europe in the barbarian invasions which swept out the Roman governments and submerged the Celtic populations. It was a fighting name. It meant "Glorious Fight."

In what today is France, the name became softened and shortened under the influence of the Latinized Celts into Clodius. Then, through the dropping of the initial "C" and the further softening of the "u" to the sound of "w" or "v," it became Louis. Taken into Europe by the Normans, it often came to be spelled Lewis. It was today Germany only the "ch" was dropped, and the apostrophe was removed, remaining as Ludwig. Still farther east it has retained more of the original form as Ludovick. In all these parts of Europe it became a family name in the same manner that other given names have.

But through the English, the name traces back often to the Middle Ages to Levi, many of the Jews coming to that country deciding to Anglicize their names.

It also traces back in a few instances to Lewis, the name of a city in England.

The first William Lewis in America arrived in Boston from England on the good ship Lion, in 1652, and was among the first founders of Cambridge.

After some years he removed to Hartford and helped to found the city. In 1666 he served as a soldier and selectman; in 1683 he was one of the founders of Haddam, Mass., a town which, later, he represented in the General Court.

William Lewis died in Farmington, Conn., having lived the life of a solid citizen, with many properties acquired through his active lifetime. One quaint item in his will leaves "land in Hartford to my granddaughters, Abigail, unless her brother Philip needs and pays her for it." Evidently William Lewis believed a wife, in women's rights.

Tomorrow—Barger.

Not Taking Risks

A Boston correspondent for a holiday, walking along one of the streets, he noticed a half-headed chemist standing at his shop door, asking if he had any hair restorer.

"Yes, sir," said the chemist, "step inside, please. Here is an article I can recommend. Testimonials from great men who have used it. It makes the hair grow in twenty-four hours."

"Awww!" said the chemist, "you can see the top of a pig's head a rub 'it' up, and I'll look back the moon and see if you'll take the truth."

The chemist returned the bottle in the shelf and kicked the errand boy for laughing.
